INDIANA JOINS IN THE HOOSIER POET'S BIRTHDAY TODAY

James Whitcomb Riley Sixty-Two Years Old Joins In Occasion.

MANY NOTABLES ATTENDING

Former Vice President Tomlinson at Banquet to Be Held This Evening in Indianapolis; Invited List Being Limited to Just 400 Persons.

By Associated Press.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 7.—James Whitcomb Riley's sixty-second birthday came today, and, just to make it more memorable than any that has preceded it, the entire state joined him in celebrating it.

This year was picked for honoring the poet because the citizens of Indiana wished to pay him tribute while he would be able to take part in and enjoy it. In addition to the weight of years, Mr. Riley has felt the burden of ill health. He has reached that season of his life "when the frost is on the pumpkin," and the frosts in the "stuck" and the state of his birth and life-long residence felt that it didn't want to delay longer the complete and formal expression of its love for him.

Governor Samuel M. Ralston recently issued a proclamation asking every community in the state to set aside the day for the honoring of "Indiana's most beloved citizen." His plan was to have business suspended as much as possible. The proclamation is being generally observed in every city, town and village, from Indianapolis down to Greenfield, where Mr. Riley was born, and Charleston, the hamlet, under the name of Tallholt, the prairie of which the poet sang with the lines:

You kin boast about yer cities, and their stately growth and size,
And brag about yer county-seats, and business enterprise,
And rail on 'em, and factories, and all such conderys,
But the little town o' Tallholt is big enough for me!

Greenfield took particular interest in the celebration. Many of the older inhabitants remember James Whitcomb Riley as a little boy, unknown to the world except as the son of Captain Reuben Riley, a highly respected citizen. Also it recalled that it is situated on the banks of the branchy river, the little stream whose joys the poet chronicled in "The Old Swimmin' Hole," and of which he had said, that, wandering up and down it, he "had more fun to the square inch, than anywhere."

Governor Ralston, Mayor Joseph F. Bell, Charles Warren Fairbanks, Meredith Nicholson and George Ade had charge of the celebration in Indianapolis. In order to lend nation-wide interest to it, they invited celebrated persons from all over the country to attend. Many accepted.

William Allen White came from Emporia, Kas.; Dr. John H. Finley and Colonel George Harvey from New York; Billy Sedwiche from Boston and Young P. Allison from Louisville, Ky., to help honor Mr. Riley.

The list of Indiana citizens taking part in the celebration is big. In addition to the members of the committee of arrangements, there were former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, Senator Kern, Vice President Marshall and others.

The program of the day called for an entertainment in a local theatre in the afternoon and a banquet at which Mr. Riley was to be the guest of honor in the evening. It was expected that the poet would read a new poem at the banquet.

At the entertainment, several of "Riley's poems, including "The Raggedy Man" and "Little Orphan Annie," were set to music by Mr. Ward Stephens. Dancers from Anna Pavlova's company interpreted a number of the verses.

Hundreds who had hoped to attend the banquet were disappointed. The committee in charge have been compelled to reject scores of appeals for accommodations as there are seats for but four hundred.

Former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks will be entertained. The coming of his birthday in October has a peculiar happiness for Mr. Riley, he said the other day. It is his favorite month, "Old October." In it he says:

I love Old October,
I can't bear to see her go—
Seems to me the loveliest month—Opportunity or chance—
"Bears like sister" to the
Some old friend "at night" by which Was a "person" out of sight
Into everlasting night.

James Whitcomb Riley was born at Greenfield, Indiana, October 7, 1853, the son of Captain Reuben A. Riley and Elizabeth Riley. He first began contributing to Indiana papers in 1873. His dialect poems brought him his greatest fame. His first book appeared under the pen-name, "Benj. F. Johnson, of Boone." Among his best known poems are "The Raggedy Man," "Little Dutch Baby," "The Old Swimmin' Hole," "An Old Sweetheart o' Mine," and "How John Quit the Farm."

LOSES AN ARM

One-Legged Man Is Run Over by a Train at Ohio.

John Carroll of Oliver, No. 2, was run over by a Baltimore & Ohio freight train at the Gallatin avenue crossing, Uniontown, last night about 10:30 o'clock. His right arm was severed at the shoulder and his head badly lacerated.

Carroll is said to have been sitting on the track when struck by the train. He was taken to the Uniontown hospital. In a previous accident, Carroll lost a leg.

HAIR AND SCALP NEED DAILY CARE

Beautiful Hair Is Within the Reach of All.

If you value the appearance of your hair you should treat your scalp as often and well as you brush your teeth and rub into the scalp pores twice daily a little Parisian Sage. This treatment is not a mere "hair tonic." It is bottled nourishment for the hair roots and it is simply wonderful what an improvement its use for even a week will make in the appearance of anybody's hair. It never injures, is delightfully cool and pleasant to the scalp and takes out the dull, lifeless look in the hair, making it soft, fluffy, glossy and beautiful. Two or three applications remove every trace of dandruff, and daily use will prevent its return. A. A. Clarke and the leading druggists everywhere can furnish you with Parisian Sage—it costs but a trifle—Ady.

GET HEALTH CERTIFICATES

Employees of Restaurants and Eating Houses Undergo Examinations.

Health certificates of about 150 employees of restaurants, refreshment stands, hotel dining rooms and kitchens and other places where food is served, have been received by Health Officer George Lester and will be forwarded to the State Department of Health in compliance with a new act of assembly.

Notices served on all such employees about a month ago were promptly obeyed. Doctors' certificates were furnished after a physical examination. Patrons of hotels and other eating places are now certain that no one who serves them has any communicable disease.

Included in the list are 16 employees of three Baltimore & Ohio dining cars who are stationed here. These men are put through periodic physical examinations by the railroad because they had little difficulty in securing certificates. Some, however, had been examined in Baltimore, and had to be re-examined by physicians within the state of Pennsylvania.

OLD FOLKS NEED "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER, BOWELS

Salts, Calomel, Pills, Act on Bowels, Like Pepper Acts in Nostrils.

Enjoy Life! Don't Stay Billows, Sick, Headachy and Constipated.

Get a 10-cent box now. Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For ages it has been an old youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

No all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. You may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural aid. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.—Ady.

A life-long investment

Year 1892: Their new ideal heating investment

Year 1915: Their life-long ideal heating investment

Twenty-four years ago we began to make and sell these now-world-famous heating outfits. Every outfit that we sold then and since is giving ideal heating results, for even conflagrations and quakes do not destroy them. If buildings are remodeled or wrecked, the outfits are used again, as they are made in units and can be altered to fit. We advertised them as life-long investments, and they are proving so in more than a million buildings at home and abroad.

AMERICAN & IDEAL RADIATORS & BOILERS

building equipment which do not deteriorate. But, more than that, these outfits repay their own cost again and again through fuel economy, less care-taking, absence of repairs, and because their cleanliness saves soiling and wearing of furniture and decorations.

Property thus outfitted sells quicker at the higher price, or 10% to 15% increased rental; or banker will extend larger loan. Why do you longer run the health risk, the fire danger, the ash and coal-gas spouting annoyances, as well as the expenses and short-life of old-fashioned heating? Twenty-four years of unequalled heating service, and many refinements, as developed in our factories and laboratories in United States, Canada and Europe, and the great volume of our business, enable us to offer IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators at a price no greater than asked for inferior devices. Accept no substitute.

Made in sizes to fit old or new stores, offices, flats, schools, churches, garages, as well as houses and cottages in country or city. No rekindling the fire all season. Same water is used for years. Phone your nearest dealer today and get his estimate. Prices now most attractive and at this season you get the services of the most skilled fitters. Ask for pamphlet (free) "Ideal Heating Investments." Puts you under no obligation to buy.

PRIMARY EXPENSE ACCOUNTS.

The expense accounts of the primary candidates have been filed and those of the Republican candidates have been the subject of much unfavorable comment on the part of the Democratic organs of Fayette county. There is a strong suspicion that the criticisms are somewhat exaggerated. The Conneltsville News, which is the personal organ of Candidate Hildebrand, files its most serious objections to the amount of money spent by the Republican nominees for District Attorney, yet $100 was not excessive in its expenditure, and it seems to have been expended for proper purposes. Candidate Hildebrand spent less than $50, but it must be remembered that he had no opposition and it was not necessary for him to spend any money as the primary. Watch his expense account for the general election, and remember that it won't include the money his Wicked Partner will spend for him.

The Unknown Standard inveighs against the Republican primary expenses generally and declares that they were excessive, yet Harold L. Johnson spent $1,192 while Judge Hildebrand, his Republican opponent who won in a walk, spent $472. These sums were properly expended, however, and there is no reason to criticize them any more than any others which are less in amount. The Standard makes some further highly imaginative charges. It says the Republican organization will raise a fund of $20,000 for the election of the Republican county ticket and that the leaders of this organization will come across handsomely. The public organization will no doubt raise such funds as it can legitimately raise for legitimate purposes, but the brewers and distillers of Fayette county were asked for the last time in 1909, and it was not by the Republican organization, either. The New Freedom organ is not to be taken seriously in politics, however. It is an organ of pretense.

The primary campaign expenses were upon the whole not excessive. The sums spent were not "enormous" as has been carelessly stated, and according to the statements they were properly spent. There was a lively race for some of the nominations and the aspirants did not spare the gasoline in trying to put themselves and their claims personally before the people. Newspaper publicity formed another large item of expenditure. "Dissemination of information" in primary campaigns has become strictly legitimate and much more efficient than it was in times past. The primary expense accounts are all right.

ADDITION.

We hear a great deal in these piping political times of the profound local knowledge and professional efficiency of Edward C. Hildebrand, the unknown Democratic candidate for District Attorney of Fayette county, and we are assured that if he is entrusted with the administration of this office it will be conducted on high-power and reform lines, though what there is to reform in the office has not been clearly set forth.

Counselor Hildebrand is a good man and a good lawyer and a good reformer, but he is developing in an alarming degree the faculty which we call ambition. It is true that ambition is not necessarily a crime. Public men may have worthy ambitions. History is filled with glorious examples. It tells us of patriots who have together led their people to freedom, of statesmen who would rather be right than be president, of honest and faithful public servants of high and low degree. To serve one's country in an humble capacity is a worthy ambition. But to be bitten by the bug of politics and have one's system poisoned by its feverish desire for office and one's life forever perverted for dramatic display of political power is not a public service but a private sin. Counselor Hildebrand has developed into a standing Democratic candidate. He is always willing to sacrifice himself upon the altar of his party's necessities. His ambitions are fast becoming chronic. He is the victim of political intrigues. In his eagerness to attain them he has developed a growing tendency to demagoguery.

In the present campaign, he is indiscreetly advertising his purpose to "clean up" the District Attorney's office, and incidentally he assures us that he is the only man for the job. The information is gratuitous. There is no evidence that the District Attorney's office has been mismanaged. As a lawyer, Counselor Hildebrand ought to know better than to present an indictment based upon no evidence but his own statement, which by all the rules of evidence is open to objection on the ground of interest and prejudice. Counselor Hildebrand is a fine example of the Political Officer who has degenerated into mere office grabber.

A GOOD FOUNDATION.

Rockefeller the Younger has worked out a plan which has been submitted to the employees and adopted by a large majority. This plan does not recognize the labor union, but it recognizes labor. It does not forbid employees from joining labor unions or supporting them. The open shop policy is insisted upon, but the right of the employee to present their demands or grievances through officers or committees of their own choosing is not only recognized but encouraged. Upon the whole the latest Rockefeller Foundation promises to become one of the most popular.

It has just been discovered that the corner of Pittsburgh street and Fairview avenue is a dangerous corner for automobiles on account of the school children. There are some other corners in Conneltsville, and they all need some more drastic treatment than plans. Nothing but the high sign will regulate the reckless driver. If the automobile association cannot prevail upon its own to be careful on the crowded thoroughfares of the city, the high sign will have to be supplanted by the third degree.

The South Side grows in grace. It has tumbled a habernacle. It bids fair to become the religious side of Conneltsville.

In the case of Hendine v. Conneltsville Water Company, now pending in the Public Service Commission Correspondence School Court of Law Justice, the defendant denies offering a flat rate to the plaintiff. There may be some dispute as to the precise terms of the company's answer to this indictment, which it will be remembered was filed by a lawyer and not by a lawyer, but there can be no question about the prompt action of the Public Service Commission, which body it will be remembered a lawyer said was controlled by the corporations.

The Democratic organs are trying to blacklist the Republican primary campaign expenses, and, lo, Abou Ben Harold Robinson's name leads all the rest!

The Sterling organ swept over the amount of campaign advertising expended in by the Cooper publications, yet the former got a goodly share of good Republican money, a good deal more than it should have had. Some people are hard to satisfy and others are never satisfied. If some of the Republican brethren would get that thought through their understandings it might be better for them, and cheaper, too.

The King of Greece does not want to fight any more. He's not afraid, but he can't afford it.

Bulgaria thinks it is the keynote of the southern situation, and perhaps it is, but by the same token it is a keynote which is going to be numerously struck.

Two Maryland divorcees gave the world a fine example of courage by marrying each other.

The Westmoreland prisoners tried to saw their way out of jail, but the warden saw them first, and now they are all sawing wood.

A fitting climax to the Fitch base-ball season is the annual Fitch first all content. This is the proficiency which speaks efficiency in times of disaster.

The Woman Suffrage editorialists being printed in the Conneltsville News and the Unknown Standard are the same in thought and in action. The editors have evidently surrendered to the Yellow press committee.

Candidate Hildebrand's campaign reminded us of Don Quixote's famous encounter with the windmill.

The announcement that President Wilson will vote for Woman Suffrage is immediately followed by the announcement that he will be onto himself a wife. Now we know.

The candidates are at home at Dunbar this week.

President Wilson is hedging on the Woman Suffrage question. The Democrats of the South are bitterly opposed to it. They have enough trouble with the black male vote without inviting the females to the polls also.

They're off and going good at the Furnace Town.

If it does not snow in Conneltsville on the night of the Hildebrand celebration it will not be the fault of the firemen.

It's a pity that other Dunbar furnace stack can't blow itself on the happy occasion.

Abe Martin.

Nobody hardly ever loses a show of temper any more, but it's a pity that it's the best thing he does.

It Is the Right Time to Buy Shoes

The right time to buy shoes is to buy them when you need them, but what we really mean—it is the right time to buy autumn and winter shoes. We notice some stores advertising high-top shoe day. Well, it would hardly be good policy to advertise low-cut or oxford shoes just now, would it? But that has nothing to do with the case. We want to call the attention of men and boys to our autumn stocks of shoes. First we want to call the attention of men to the high class working shoes that we are offering. Not long ago a brogan or hob-nail, or some other shoe on that order, was considered the popular work shoe. Now we don't buy them at all—they are hardly ever called for. The working man wants a better shoe—$2.50, $3.00, $3.50, and even $4.00 they pay for them, and the value we give for that money is high class. At the same time they are good looking and well fitting. Some men even wear them for dress shoes. We have a number of standardized styles. Often we hear of a man wearing them in the mines a year, on coke yards a year—that is recommendation enough. Coming to the dress shoes, we make the statement without fear of contradiction that for men's dress shoes, and school shoes for boys, we have the best values in the coke region. There are numerous prices and numerous styles—black, tan—heavy double soles, calf lined, warm and waterproof. We haven't very much more to say about them further than to ask you to give them a trial. Every pair is guaranteed—money returned if they are not satisfactory. Try a Union Supply Company shoe department.

SCOTTDALE, Oct. 7.—The passing of some ordinances and the vacating of a loan until the street paving assessments are paid in the most important actions of council at its regular meeting here today. Reported by the secretary amounted to $118.16 for the month.

The vacation of an alley leading from the right of way of the South-west branch of the Pennsylvania railroad east to the real estate owned by the United States Coal and Pipe & Foundry Company at the line of Water street, and the vacation of the alley leading from Federal avenue north to Federal street, and known as Water street, were taken up by ordinance and these under a suspension of the rules were passed three times and finally.

Another ordinance was passed in a similar manner for the providing of a bond for the extending of a sewer from where Orange street crosses the Pennsylvania railroad right of way and across lands of B. H. Kelly. There was a complaint that a ditch dug by Mr. Brithwood on Eleanor avenue had been allowed to be open over Sunday, making it dangerous for travelers.

That there was $2,500.00 in the general fund and current bills amounting to $1,222.23, and in the paving fund there was $1,166.96, and paving bills of $3,326.44, was the report of the finance committee. A necessary $5,500 loan was authorized. Since after the first of November street paving assessments will begin to come in, it is thought this will be a very short term loan.

The Fire Department thanked the council for their donation to attend the Sharpsburg convention. The fire and water committee was authorized to have a wreath of hose cut repaired, or if necessary, buy a new one.

Three new lights were authorized on Merchant street, but one asked for on Short street at the mouth of Porter alley was not recommended. President Fitzsimmons reported that the West Pittsburgh street and Liverpool avenue paving is completed. George street is being graded and Broadway is being cleaned up. Tax collector S. B. MacMillan reported $2,071.69 taxes collected.

The members present were Messrs. Ray Baker, William J. Butler, P. H. Hills, John Gant, W. W. Hines, H. G. Martin, W. T. Mawer, J. J. Fitzsimmons, and President J. W. Fitzsimmons.

Celebrate Victory.
There was enough food consumed last night to feed the cook stove of town for two weeks when the High School and grades celebrated with a bonfire at Loucks Park the victory over Connellsville High School football team. All afternoon an automobile truck, several one-horse wagons and some push carts and wheelbarrows were in use getting wood to the park. It all made a magnificent pile. In firing the pile the high school showed higher intelligence than the college. They did not throw any gasoline barrels into the flames, as did some students of an eastern college last year, and he burned up in consequence. The blaze went high, lighting up the whole end of town. The parade of the entire school covered the town pretty thoroughly. An automobile lead the parade, followed by it was an effigy of Connellsville, borne on a stretcher by about a dozen students. There was plenty of noise, from whistles to gongs, and the great majority had it great. There were few "roughnecks" took the affair too seriously to heart and apparently lost their temper to judge by their language and tried to make the affair so far as they could, they seemed more like a bunch than a football celebration.

TO OVERCOME NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA

A Physician's Advice.

Nervous people, as a rule, suffer greatly from dyspepsia. The minute things go wrong, or something upsets the nerves, or they are tired and overworked, they feel it in their stomach. Appetite vanishes and gives way to dull, dreadfulness and what they do eat doesn't digest properly. Then comes belching, heart burn, sour rising, and a whole train of distressing symptoms.

Nervous Dyspepsia should never be treated with pepin pills or artificial stimulants. The stomach is a sensitive organ, and the nerves that control it should at such time, be calmed and strengthened, when all stomach distress will quickly cease, appetite will return, and the stomach will digest its food properly, and its nature restored.

Thanks to a remarkable chemical discovery, it is now possible to feed the nerve cells with the exact stimulus they require when overworked and underfed, and a preparation called METAS is producing remarkable results in the treatment of Nervous Dyspepsia, and other nerve disorders. It makes a remarkable change in any person in ten minutes by the stomach, strengthening the stomach and clearing the nerve cells with strength, peace, power and tremendous reserve energy, and giving nerves of steel, a clear head and brain, courage, power, quick wit, and real vital vigor. METAS cannot harm anyone. It contains no drugs, no poisonous habit forming poisons, and this is enough to give lasting relief to even the most obstinate cases. The Laurey Drug Company and other leading druggists everywhere are selling them with a positive guarantee of satisfaction, or money back.—Adv.

DUNBAR LOSES TO COLLIER TEAM IN INTERESTING GAME

Brithwood Gets the Decision Over Big Jack Quinn.

DUNBAR CANNOT HIT THE BALL

Federal League Star Works Four Innings and Then Retires in Favor of Swope; Jones Starts at Bat for Team From the Furnace Town.

The Collier nine, winners of the Lynch Cup in the Frick League, took over the Dunbar team yesterday afternoon by a 5-0 score. Jack Quinn, the Baltimore Federal league twirler, was on the mound for Dunbar the first four innings and then Swope took the mound, but not before Collier had scored one run on Quinn.

Brithwood allowed Dunbar seven hits, but not a run. In one inning a man reached third, but Brithwood fanned making a third out. Clements, the old National League, donned a uniform for the first time in six years and caught Quinn. He was relieved by Fisher when Swope took the mound. Jones was the only real swatter that Dunbar had in the lineup. He got four hits out of four times up.

Quinn started things by striking out the first three men to face him. Brithwood retired the side on strikes in his half of the inning, although Jones did not get a hit to right field.

In the fourth frame, when Collier got the first run off Quinn, Long was the first man up. He worked the federal League for three balls and then hit to right field, but a long fly to deep right. Long went home after the ball was caught, the throw by Swope not reaching the plate. Rehner ended things by fanning.

In the last half of the inning Dunbar had one of their chances to score. Jones hit through first. Quinn then went out to Brithwood on a pop fly. Fisher hit to left field and Jones went to second. Jones then hit to right field at second and was thrown out at first. Jones and Fisher reaching third and second. Baker was the next man up and Brithwood settled down by fanning him, retiring the side.

Some shifting was done on the Dunbar team at the beginning of the fifth. Quinn going to center, Swope taking the box and Fisher relieving Clements. Henry took Swope's position at catcher. Collier was retired in short order in this inning, but Brithwood repeated the performance with Dunbar.

Collier started things in the sixth and ended up by getting four runs. Adams was the first man up and fanned. Long then got a base on balls and was advanced to second on Coughenour's hit. Swope made a big play to right for a double and the ball was thrown home to catch Long but he was safe. Coughenour reached third and Swope occupied the second bag. Rehner tried Quinn's speed by hitting to deep middle setting a triple, scoring Swope and Coughenour.

Leadbetter kept things going and got a hit, scoring Rehner. Rehner followed with a hit and Leadbetter went to second. Klingner came to bat and after fouling six consecutive balls hit to short and a double play followed, getting Rehner at second and Klingner at first.

There were no more features until the last inning, each side being retired in order. In Collier's half the bases were filled up by Coughenour making a third out by fanning. For Dunbar Jones hit between second and first. Then Quinn fanned. Fisher hit to Long to reach first but the whole Collier team tried to catch Jones between second and third. Jones after dodging about reached second, safe.

Miller hit but was thrown out at first. The ball was thrown to second to catch Fisher who was running for that base. Jones started home on the play but Long held the ball at second and touched Fisher before Jones had crossed the plate and the score and not caught. Jones and Brithwood are slated to pitch for Dunbar today against Trotter. Labine will be on the mound for the visiting team.

UNBEARABLE SKIN TROUBLE SPREAD
Rapidly. Clothing Irritated. Lost Sleep Continually. Itching and Burning Intense. Scratched Until Exhausted. Cuticura Healed.

417 Colwyn Ave., Darby, Pa.—"My uncle's trouble began as an irritation and was almost unbearable when he was in bed and became more and more intense. It spread so rapidly that he became alarmed. His arms were first affected above the elbows and then it spread over both arms and shoulder blades. He was unable to move his arms. It burned so that he rubbed it and that made it spread more. His clothing irritated it and at night he lost sleep continually, sometimes lying awake the whole night. The itching and burning were so intense that he scratched himself until exhausted. "His sister advised him to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. He purchased two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and two boxes of Cuticura Soap and before he had used half of either he felt a great relief. He steadily recovered and was able to sleep until in about five weeks he was entirely healed of the trouble." (Signed) Paul A. Ludwig, August 3, 1914.

Boston Presents Same Trio Which Helped West Title From New York
In 1912; Phillies Have Dangerous
Hitters in the Outer Garden.

By Associated Press
NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The outfields of the Red Sox and the Phillies are expected to play roles of unusual importance in the coming World's Series between the Boston Americans and the Philadelphia Nationals. No other department of the rival team can show the collection of stars that will be found among the right players who are available for places in the outer garden. Mention need only be made of Tris Speaker and Harry Hooper for the American force and Outfield Gavvy Cravath, Pat Morin's home run slinger, in order to establish the high standard of these two outfields.
As to which is the stronger in all-round offense and defensive play there is much argument, but each advantage as may exist is generally conceded to the Red Sox. Each club has a regular fielding trio and one utility player, the line-up being as follows:
Boston: Hooper, right field; Speaker, centered; Lewis, left field and Henrickson, utility fielder; Philadelphia:
Cravath, right field; Puckett, center field; Whitted, left field and Becker utility fielder.
Eliminating the two utility fielders and considering the outfield as units, the unofficial averages for the season show that Boston has a twenty point advantage in batting strength while the Philadelphia trio is five points stronger in fielding. The Red Sox combination is also shown to be faster on the paths since it is credited with having stolen fifty-four bases to the Phillies forty-three. In extra base hits the winners of the American League pennant outclass the senior league first basemen in ability to drive out two and three base hits but fall behind the Phillies in home runs due in great part to the terrific slugging of Cravath on his home grounds.
Considering individually the outstanding strength of the Red Sox outfield is made more apparent. In right field Hooper will be opposed by Cravath and in the records the former has the advantage of stolen bases, sacrifice hits and fielding while the Phillies' power outclass the Red Sox fielder as a batter. The fielding averages of the pair are: Hooper .974,

Cravath .958, while the batting ability of the two fielders is indicated by Cravath's average of .277 as against Hooper's .242.

At center Tris Speaker has the better of Dodge Puckett in hitting, fielding and base stealing. Speaker has hit 123 during the league season, scoring twenty-four runs, hitting twenty-three homers, seventeen sacrifice hits, twenty-eight stolen bases and 106 runs. In 530 times at bat he has hit in 290 times at bat scored seventy hits, forty-one runs, nine stolen bases, twenty-five sacrifice hits, fourteen doubles, three triples and a like number of home runs giving him an average of .312. In fielding the difference is not so marked for Puckett fielded .970 to Speaker's .975.

Speaker's ability cannot be expressed entirely by figures for in his seeming divination of the course of the ball he is a source of much dependence by the Red Sox in their plans to check the powerful offense of the Phillies.
His ability to sense the dropping place of a fly ball, and to be there when it falls, is expected to reduce greatly the efficiency of the long driving bats of the Phillies' slingers.
Little, if any, behind Speaker in this respect is Hooper, whose saving value in the World's Series of 1912 are still fresh in the memory of the fans.

Lewis, in left field, possesses this same keenness and speed but he will not outclass Whitted, of the Moran believe, by any means. In fact, the season's averages give the Philadelphia representative the better of Lewis in fielding by thirty-five points, while the batting advantage of the Red Sox player is but fourteen points.
Lewis poked out more extra base hits than Whitted but the latter was faster on the bases by a considerable margin.
The latter is also stouter in the field, although lacking the ability to make the spectacular catches with which Lewis electrifies the fans from time to time.

Of the two utility outfielders Becker is the better hitter by more than thirty points while Hendrickson has a very slight margin in fielding. The former has figured in almost twice as many games this season as the Red Sox extra fielder and, next to Cravath, holds the Phillies' record as a home run hitter. In lengthy drives and speed on the base paths Becker is superior to Hendrickson but the latter is more in the handling of fly balls and throws more accurately to the infield.

Due allowance must be made, however, for the fact that these out-fields have played their home games in parks of widely different dimensions. Many of the extra base hits, especially some of the home runs of Cravath, would have been likely outfielded on a field of the size of the Boston Braves' park where a portion of the coming World's Series is to be played. With a trio of the ability of Hooper, Speaker and Lewis on guard, this is a factor that must not be overlooked. Conversely, some of the two and three base drives of these same players might have gone for home runs had they been made on a short field such as the Phillies have played their home games on this year.

THE BATTLE-CRY

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
AUTHOR OF "The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS"
ILLUSTRATIONS by C. D. RHODES

"Remember that you're a human being," she questioned in perplexity. She stood there with one hand on the back of her chair, her face puzzled. He decided at once that this expression was the most beautiful she had ever worn, and he sturdily held that conviction until her eyes changed to laughter, when he forswore his allegiance to the first fascination for the second.

"Are you sure you are a human being?" she teased. "When you wear that sulky face you are only half human. I ought to make you stand in the corner until you can be cheerful."

"I reckon," he said a little bitterly, "if you ordered me to stand in the corner I'd just about do it. I reckon that's about how much manhood I've got left."

But he laughed, too, in the next moment.

The morning of the trial dawned on a town prepared to face a bloody day. Long before training crowds had drifted down to the station.

As though by common consent, the McBrirs stood on one side of the track and the Hayveys on the other.

For an hour they massed there, lowering of face, yet quietly waiting. Then the whistle shrieked across the river and each crowd moved a little forward, hands lightened on rifles, awaiting the supreme moment.

The deputy sheriff came out of the depot, and stood waiting between the two groups with a strained assumption of unconcern. But when the train arrived it carried an extra coach, and at sight of it the McBrirs groaned and knew once more they were defeated.

They had come to wrest a prisoner from a sheriff's posse and encountered trained soldiery. Behind the opened coaches of the coach they saw a solid mass of blue overcoats and brown service-hats. Every window was filled with rifle-barrels and fixed bayonets.

Then, while the train was held beyond its usual brief stop, and while those rifle-barrels were trained impartially on Hayveys and McBrirs, a line of soldiers began pouring out into the roadbed and forming columns along each side of the track. Both lines moved slowly but unwaveringly forward, pressing back the crowds before their urgent bayonets.

Two wicked-looking galling guns were unloaded from the baggage car, and, tending them as men might handle beloved pets, came squads whose capes were faced with artillery red.

Shortly a compact little procession, in column of fours, with the galling guns at its front and a hollow square at its center, was marching briskly to the courthouse. In the hollow square went the defendant, handcuffed to the sheriff. Without delay or confusion the galling guns were put in place, two commanding the courthouse square and one casting its many-eyed glance up the hillside at the back.

Then, with the bayonets of sentries supple range while Judge Sidering walked calmly into the building and instructed the sheriff to open court.

His honor had directed that every man save officials who sought admission should be dismissed at the door. Luke Thixton bent forward in his chair and growled into the ear of Old Milt McBrir, who sat at his left.

"I've got as much chance as any as a fish out of a hilltop. I ain't got no notion for me?" and Milt looked about helplessly and swore under his breath.

One onlooker there had not been searched. Young Job bore the credentials of a special deputy sheriff, and under his coat was a holster with its flap unbuckled. While the panel was being selected, while lawyers wrangled and witnesses testified, while the court gazed off with half-closed eyes, causing only to overrule or sustain a motion, young Job sat with his arms on the table, and never did his eyes leave the face of the accused.

It was a very expeditious trial. Judge Sidering glanced at the faces of Old Milt and young Job, and had no desire to prolong the agony of those hours. The defense halfheartedly relied upon the device of a false alibi, which the state promptly punctured. Even the lawyers seemed in haste to be through, and set a limit on their arguments.

At the end his honor read brief instructions, and the panel was locked in its room.

Then the McBrirs drew a little closer around the chair where Old Milt waited, and the militia captain strengthened his guard outside and began unostentatiously sprinkling uniformed men through the dingy courtroom until the hodge-podge throng was flecked with blue.

At length there came a rap on the door of the juryroom, and instantly the low drone of voices fell to a hush. His honor poured a glass of water from the ribbed pitcher at his elbow, while Luke Thixton and Milt McBrir, for all their timidity of feature, braced themselves like some ruthless animal of many legs, the rough throng along the courtroom benches scraped its feet on the floor.

Young Job shifted his chair a little so that the figure of the defendant might be in an uninterrupted line of vision. His right hand quietly slipped under his coat, and his fingers loosened a weapon in its holster and nursed the trigger.

Then, with a dragging of non-lethargy, the twelve "good men and true" shambled to a semicircle before the bench, gazing stolidly and blankly at the rows of battered law books which served his honor as a background.

There they stood awkwardly in the gaze of all. Judge Sidering glanced into the beetling countenance of their foreman and inquired in that bored voice which seems a judicial affectation even in questions of life and death: "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

The foreman nodded. The sheet of paper, which he passed to the clerk, had been signed by more than one juror with a cross because he could not write.

"We, the jury," read the clerk in a clear voice, "find the defendant, Luke Thixton, guilty as charged in the indictment—"

There, although he had not yet reached the end, he indulged in a dramatic pause, then read on the more important clause in the terms of the Kentucky law which leaves the placing of the penalty in the hands of the jurors—and fix his punishment, at death.

As though relieved from a great pressure, young Job McBrir withdrew his hand from his holster and settled back in his chair with fixed muscles. Judge Sidering's formal question broke in on the dead quiet. "So say you all, gentlemen?" and twelve shaggy heads nodded wordless affirmation.

Soldiers filed in from the rear. In less than thirty seconds the prisoner had disappeared. Outside the galling guns remained in place, and the troops patrolled the streets.

For two days the McBrirs stayed in town, but the troops lingered longer, and in that time Luke had again been taken back to Louisville.

Once more Old Milt led back a disgruntled faction with no more spirit, a program than to go home and bide his time again. When they brought Luke back to hang him, his friends would have one final chance.

A seeming of quiet, under which hot wrath smoldered, settled over hill and dale, but a new note began to run through the cabins of the McBrir dependents. It was a note of warning: "The time is near."

Old Milt read the signs and felt that his dominion was now a thing upon which decay had set its seal, and under his grave face he masked a bronching heart. His star was setting, and since he was no longer young and utterly incapable of bounding, he sickened slowly through the wet winter, and men spoke of him as an invalid.

With Milt "all in," there was no one to take up the reins of clan government, and those elements that had been held together only by his iron dominance began drifting asunder.

One mill day when a group of McBrirs met with their sacks of grain at a water-mill, someone put the question: "Who's a-goin' ter go down there, an' take Luke Thixton away from their Hayveys now that Old Milt's down an' out?"

There was a long silence, and at last a voice droned: "Hilt ain't a goin' ter be me. What's Luke Thixton ter do, anyhow? He didn't never lend me no money."

"I reckon that's a heap of sense in that," answered another. "Pears like, when I come ter recollect, most of their fightin' an' fursin' I've done in my time ain't been in my own quarrels now." And slowly that spirit spread.

When Anse Hayvey went over to the school one day, he took him again to the rifle-range, now once more well filled. "Have a look, my lord bar-barian," she laughed. "Mars is paying me tribute. So shall it ever be with tyranny."

Slowly, and one by one, Anse Hayvey took up the pieces and examined them. It ain't only Mars that's paying ye tribute," he thought, but he only said: "That's all right. I seem to see more McBrir guns there than Hayvey guns. It would suit me all right if ye got the last one of 'em."

"Hain't you as well hang yours there, too?" she teased. "I'm still willing to give you the honors of war."

But he only smiled. "I'll hang mine up last of all, I reckon. Luke Thixton ain't hung yet, and there's other blunders a-brewin' besides that."

"What clouds?" she asked.

"There was a bunch of surveyors through here lately," he replied slowly. "They just sort of looked round and went away. Some day they'll come back."

"And then?"

Anse Hayvey shrugged his shoulders. "I may need my gun," he said.

Not until it became certain that he must die did Old Milt send for his son, or even permit him to be told of his illness. But just as the winter's siege was ending Young Milt came home, and two days later the mountains heard that the old feudist was dead.

Brother Anse Talbot and Juana, a doctor who had come from Lexington were witnesses to that house-taking. They saw the old man beckon feebly to the boy. Young Milt came and sat on the edge of the bed, schooling his features as he waited the final injunctions which, by his code, would be mandatory for life.

They all waited to hear the old hog break out in a final burst of vindictiveness, to see him lay upon his boy's young shoulders the unfinished ordeals of his hatreds. But it was the eye of the father, not the feudist, that gazed up from the pillow. His wasted fingers lay affectionately on his son's knee and his voice was gentle.

"Son," said the old man, "I'd love ter see ye live at peace of ye kin. I've done tried ther other way an' hit's kilt me. I'd rather ye'd let my rights be buried along with my body. Anse Hayvey's goin' ter run things in these mountains. He's a smarter man than me. I couldn't never make no peace with Anse Hayvey, but the things that's always stood betwixt us lays a long way back. Mobby you an' him mought pull together an' end ther feud. I leaves that with you; but hit took death ter make me see hit."

Here he broke off exhaustedly, and for a time seemed fighting for breath. At last he added: "I've knowed all along ther Luke killed Brother McBrir. I thought I'd ought ter tell ye."

A week after the death of the old leader Young Milt rode over to the house of Anse Hayvey, and there he found Job McBrir. The two young men looked at each other without expression. Just after the death of his father Job would not willingly have renewed their quarrel, and as for Young Milt, he no longer felt resentment.

"Anse," said the heir to McBrir leadership, "I'd like to hear you offer ye my hand. I've done found out that Luke is as guilty as hell. I didn't believe hit afore. So far as I'm concerned, he kin hang, an' I'm goin' ter tell every McBrir man that will harken ter me ther same thing. So far as I'm concerned," went on the old man, "I'm against the shootin' of any man from the back."

Just as the earliest flowers began to peep out with shy faces in the woods and the first softness came to the air, men began rearing a scaffold in the courthouse yard at Port.

One day a train brought Luke Thixton back to the hills, but this time only a few soldiers came with him, and they were not needed. Juana tried to forget the significance of that Friday, but she could not, for all the larger boys were absent from school, and all day Thursday the road had been sprinkled with horses and wagons.

She knew with a shudder that they were going to town to see the hanging. A gruesome fascination of interest attached to so unheard of an event as a McBrir clansman dying on a Hayvey scaffold with his people standing by idle.

But Luke Thixton, going to his death there among enemies, went without flinching, and his snarling lips even twisted a bit derisively when he mounted the scaffold, as they had twisted when he declined Good Anse Talbot's ministrations in the jail.

Since he must die among enemies, he would give them no weakness over which to gloat in memory.

He raised his head, and his snarl turned slowly and unpleasantly into a grin of contempt, and his last words were a picturesque curse called down alike on the heads of the foes who put him to death and on the false friends who had failed him.

Afterward Young Milt and Bad Anse shook hands, and the younger man said to the older:

"Now that I've proved to ye that I meant what I said, I reckon we can make a peace that'll endure a spell, can't we?"

And Anse answered: "Milt, I've been hopin' we could ever since the day we watched for the feller that aimed to burn down the school."

The Sly Little Man. I know of a dry little, sly little man, who comes over our threshold whenever he can.

Though little he cares for the sunshine and light, He haunts our library when it is night.

When papa is reading his paper with care, And I'm dozing all snug in the cushioned armchair,

When mamma looks up from her sewing—"My dear, Perhaps you don't know that the sand-man's been here!"

Then I hunt round the curtain, on top of the bookcase,

Neath table and table, in all sorts of nooks, And out on the stairway and down in the hall,

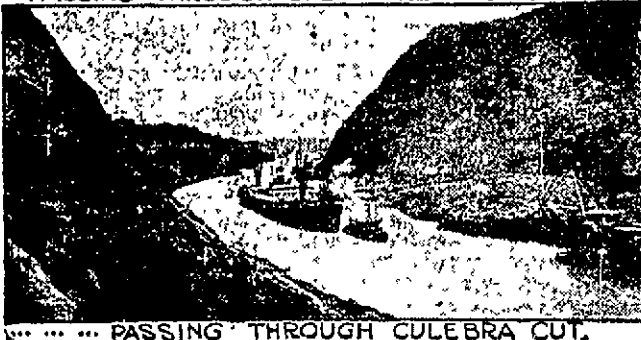

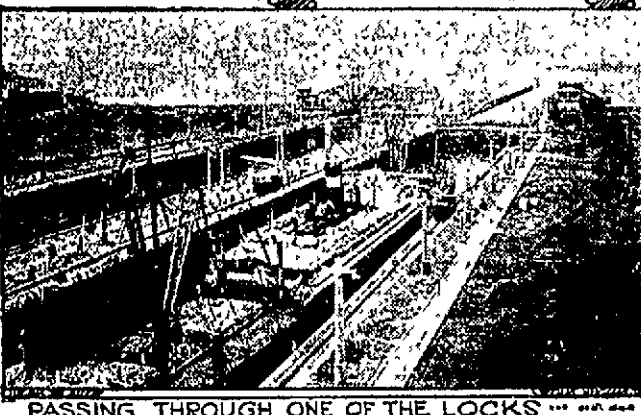

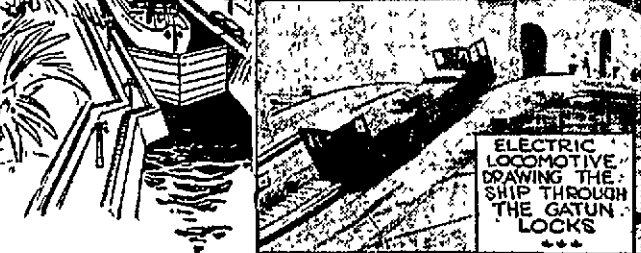

But I can't find the sly little sandman at all.

EXPORT TRADE BRISK

Most of Coal Is Being Carried in Tramp Steamships.

The feature of the coal trade is the glutinous department, in which an active export demand at high prices is limited, only by the amount of vessels that can be secured. Practically all of these shipments to foreign countries are being handled through the intermittent movement of tramp steamers.

The coal is being shipped to Scandinavia, France, Italy, Spain and other European countries, and to South America. As previously stated, a part of the buying in this market for South American trade is being done by agents of British concerns who wish to retain their South American customers after the termination of the European war.

That's a question that should occur instantly to every parent when school reports tell of inattention or backwardness.

It is physically impossible for any child to make proper progress in school without perfect vision. Careful official investigation in hundreds of schools has shown that more than 70 per cent of the so-called "backward" or mentally deficient children are actually sufferers from defective vision.

A big majority of such children show immediate improvement after being fitted with correct glasses.
